

WHO is the real WINNER?

Winners are not the people who never fail, but those who never quit. A real winner is the one who is always ready for challenges. Come what may, a person who accepts the difficulties and braves them is the real winner.

The essential qualities of a winner include strength, satisfaction, and most important, endurance. One should have the strength to face problems and fight them to win. As strength does not come from physical abilities, it comes from an indomitable will. When failure comes, it is quite natural for anyone to become upset.

But one who takes it as a challenge and strides forward is the winner as FAIL to him is First Attempt In Learning. Also, failure is not the opposite of success, but it is a part of it. If one would not fail, he would not have that burning desire to succeed.

Winning only certain achievements is not enough. These increase one's confidence for sure, but they act as pieces of paper, but in the hearts of the people.

One need not show the proof of his excellence, but it should be the people who speak about it, because the less someone speaks about his greatness, the more we think about it.

A winner should always be open-minded and polite with people because it is better to be open-minded rather than being knowledgeable. Overall, a winner needs to set an ex-stepping stones for the ultimate aim in one's life.

A winner is a person who not just exists during the life span gifted by the almighty, but the one who lives life to its fullest: enjoying each and every moment of life and learning something new from it. The hunger to win, actually succeed plays an important role.

The achievements of a winner do not lie in mere ample not be an example. He needs to be a pathmaker, not a follower.

To conclude, a winner should be a man of values, not of mere success. Waiting to win is common, but working to win transforms a person into a winner. And only that type of person is the real winner in a sphere of life.
