

Being teacher is a job for life

Growing old is inevitable but growing up is optional. Don't just live and die, but ensure that you leave a positive and long lasting impact wherever you go.

I wonder sometime that in this age of crass materialism, can any profession qualify as the noblest one? I ruminated on it for a long time and now, after giving few years to this profession, I feel the need to respond with certain degree of authority. Without an iota of doubt, I would not hesitate to say "Teaching".

To teach is to touch a life forever

A teacher affects eternity, presents the past, reveals the present, and creates the future. Will our world be populated by people ready and able to meet that future as a creative and critical thinkers; as wise, compassionate and knowledgeable citizens as skilled and motivated workers within their professions? The answer to all this questions lies with "Teachers".

More than any other profession, teaching has the power to create a healthy, just, and peaceful world. It has the capacity to inspire life-long learning and a passion for knowledge, understanding and innovation.

Is anything more important than this?

What makes the profession of teaching the noblest profession of them all? I believe that teaching is the profession with the greatest responsibility where teachers are volunteering a great amount of their time for the good of their students with no additional compensation.

Actually, we all very well know how far above and beyond teachers go to ensure that their students succeed as our students become extensions of our family and we refer to them as our kids.

Moreover, the teachers out there, removes the darkness of person's life and transforms them into life full of silver lining, provide their students with the knowledge they truly need, the creative thinking skills, morals of life and fill them with fruits of character and humanity. Alternatively, If you are a teacher you have a job for life. Teaching is the only profession which invests in making LIFE and not LIVING.

Finally, I dedicate this article to all the wonderful, brightest and most motivated, most creative and compassionate people working for the betterment and peace of this world known as TEACHERS. Congratulations to all of them for being a part of it and dedicating their lives for the noblest profession on this planet earth known as TEACHING.

So, let's continue making LIFE!
